

THE old picture above shows the rear of Kettering General Hospital.

Although the central building still remains much of the rest has changed and the ornate gardens have been built on.

The picture on the left shows the Sunday School Scholars' Cot at the hospital.

It was maintained by voluntary contributions from Sunday schools in the town. They needed to raise £30 a year.

Note the cot is made of iron — complete with brass knobs!

The ET is grateful to Paul Timmins of Athlestone Road, Kettering for sending in these wonderful old snaps.
